

Recall is high where the manual set is large; small scopes are uninformative

Within each panel, ordered by size of the manual reference set; marker area $\propto$ that size (one scale across both panels).
Wide intervals mark scopes with too few papers to support a claim — a point estimate of 100% on $n=1-2$ is not evidence.
Spatial prion disease and spatial spinal muscular atrophy have no manually curated papers and are omitted.